A WAR REMINISCENCE.

Col. Streight's Command—How it was Captured Through the Device of a Southern Maiden.

Brookly Eagle.

In the month of May, 1863, the Army of the Cumberland, under the command of Rosecrans, lay at Chatanooga. Gen. Garfield, the chief of the staff to the commanding general, being anxious to strike a blow at the railroad system of Georgia, persuaded Rosecrans to authorize the fitting out of a raiding expedition against Rome in that state.

Garfield undertook with joyous anticipation, as we learn from his letters to secretary Chase, the formation of this force, and it was at his suggestion that Col. Streight was placed in command of the expedition, composed of nearly two thousand picked soldiers. With what success this federal force made its raid on Rome, and just how much of the Empire State of the south Col. Streight contrived to destroy are matters of familiar history.

The raiders reached Rome, it is true, but they went as prisoners of the brave Gen. Forrest, who, with a brave little band of four hundred men, ill clad and poorly fed, sent the whole invading force to Richmond on the very railroad they set out to destroy. Gen. Garfield was never known to speak of the painful result of his military skill with half the enthusiasm with which he put this formidable squadron in the field.

The capture of Streight by Forrest, as before stated, is familiar history; but who has been introduced to Miss Emma Sansom, the brave Gadsden girl of sixteen summers, by whose forethought and prompt action the capture was made possible? The great war developed many deeds of daring on the part of women on both sides of the contest, but it seems to me that the heroic conduct of Miss Sansom deserves to rank as a conspicuous example of female courage and of womanly devotion to a cause she believed to be just. So far as known, there has never been any recognition of the value of her services, except on the part of Gen. Forrest in his official report. The state of Alabama did, indeed, vote her a section of land, but has never been able to convey to her a valid title to the same.

The part Miss Emma took in the dramatic pursuit of Col. Streight by Forrest's force may be briefly stated. Hard by her humble home was a stream which bore the suggestive name of Black Creek. At the date of our story this stream was greatly swollen from heavy rains. Col. Streight, after passing over the bridge, took care to burn it. Forrest was at his heels, but finding no means of crossing Black Creek gravely meditated an abandonment of the pursuit. Riding up to Miss Emma's house to spend the night he was quickly informed by her that in a secluded spot a mile distant up the creek a ford could be found for his cavalry, which would enable him to cross and continue his march. Startled by this unexpected intelligence, he requested her to accompany him and to point out the place. No time was to be lost, and, although Col. Streight's skirmishers were firing across the creek, which now appeared as a mighty river, Miss Emma consented to go. Having no horse of her own she vaulted up behind Forrest, and bravely exposed her life to the bullets of the enemy, while the general led his men under her guidance to the welcome ford.

The sequel can be told in a few words. She remained on the bank of Black Creek long enough to see the last soldier safely over, and then waving her hand she bid them all good-bye, God speed and a splendid victory. Returning home through the open fields alone they sent up a silent prayer for the capture of Col. Streight and his raiders. The answer to that prayer was not long delayed. Two days later, while in camp cooking, eating and carousing, little dreaming that Forrest was on the Rome side of Black Creek, Colonel Streight's entire command was themselves raided and forced to surrender. No won-nat Streight, on learning Forrest's actual strength, exclaimed: "I am sold." Emma Sansom must have been an exceedingly beautiful girl. One of her former lovers describes her as "a lovely blonde, with clear, sparkling blue eyes and long, flowing golden hair." She was of medium height, of fine form and in her movements quick and graceful. She is now the happy mother of three children in the flourishing state of Tennessee.

RAG CARPETS.

An Old Fashioned Industry Turned to Account in the Decorative Revival.

Harper's Bazar.

Perhaps it will sound odd to speak of rag carpets as fashionable work, but specimens of domestic weaving have been carried to England by traveled ladies with other curios, like Navajo blankets and Arizona pottery, and the notable English woman have taken to using their woolen savings in this way. It goes by the name of American work, and a well made rag mat is not disdained at the nursery bedside, in the smoking room or, indeed, in my lady's chamber. Now there is rag carpet, and the Bohemian weaver down in Chatham street will turn you out a very different piece of work from the old rag carpet, with its stiff stripes and bars. Cut your useless cashmere cloth or flannel into strips three-fourth of an inch wide clear through the piece; sew these together at the ends till you have a pound of such strips, which makes a large ball. Fine heavy cloth of men's wear is cut less than half an inch wide, and the finer the strips the more they make the weaving. A pound and a quarter ball will weave a yard of carpet a yard wide. Mix your colors well when sewing with two or three yards of red, green or yellow for every six or more of dark color and you will have a carpet or mat with uneven barrings of gay color, dark and gravely pleasing to the eye. Mix bright color with every yard of dark stripes and the result is a mottled ground; or, if you have enough of any dark rich color, you may have a mottled center with borders of deep blue, black and deep yellow. The strips can be dyed bronze, peacock, deep red, or any strong color, after sewing. If you want something in modern taste after your carpet is woven, sew three or four widths together with a border of plain Venetian or bright-colored in-grain bordering, stain the edges of the floor, and you have an odd, handsome mat for your sitting room, which is practically indestructible. Such mats are advised for nurseries and country sitting rooms, and no one, seeing them for the first time, would ever dream of classing them with the humdrum rag carpets of old. The smooth basket work surface, the rich colors, vie with those of foreign mats, and in the point of taste a well-chosen English home-made mat will please better than the cheap red and green Turkish rugs, which, in fact, are the "rag carpets" of pleasant homes in the East. Let us show a little respect for the works of our own country now that foreigners have found out their merits for us.

A Rich Soil.

Wall Street Daily News.

"How is the soil of Kansas?" asked one of the group as the traveler passed.

"Richest in the world, sir," was the reply. "I know a New York State man who went to Kansas seven years ago with only $15 in cash, and he is now worth $20,000.

"Whew! What did he raise principally?"

"I believe it was a check, sir; but they couldn't exactly prove it on him! Think of a soil that

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is, certain its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District. ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan., 20, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure' has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ringbone was forming, I procured bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours,

P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure,' one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a very deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints, or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL DRUGGISTS have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vermont.

Excursion.

The steamer Fleetwood arrived at this place on Tuesday evening, having on board a merry party of excursionists making the round trip. While lying at the landing there was a brilliant display of fireworks from the boat and delightful music by a fine string band that accompanied the excursion. Among the persons who joined the party at this place were Mrs. Laura Dimmitt, Misses Etta Everett, Affie Watson, Lucie Sulser, Hannah Watson Duke, Lizzie Moores and Messrs. Tom Keith, Walter Watson, Ed. Watson, Chas. Mitchell and Hiram Pearce. Wat Baldwin, Frank Phister and Harry Frazier accompanied the party part of the way and returned on the Boston. The excursionists were all in the best spirits and were loud in the praise of the Fleetwood and her gentlemanly officers.

Suicide.

Mr. John W. Reese, a well known and respected citizen of the Fern Leaf neighborhood in this county, put an end to his life on Monday by hanging himself at his residence. He was about fifty years of age and had been in ill health for some time past and subject to severe spells of nervous prostration. These are supposed to have affected his mind and prompted the rash act. He was a brother of Mr. D. J. Reese, the school commissioner, and of Messrs. E. J. and Joshua Reese. He leaves a wife and two children.

The fourth passed off in Maysville very quietly. There was very little disorder anywhere in the city.

The Lexington Transcript sings :

Now to the church fair's revelry
He takes the old man's daughter,
Where sirens sweet in saucers sell
Three berries for a quarter.

THE following is from the Covington news column of the Cincinnati Commercial:

The Keefer Mill Company, which was incorporated a few days ago, yesterday bought the mill property on Craig and Fifth streets, from Mr. David Keefer, for $50,000. The ground is 113 by 80 feet, and with it goes the machinery, fixtures and everything pertaining to the business. Yesterday the stockholders of the Keefer Mill Company met and chose Mr. David Keefer as president, and Mr. Geo. D. Keefer as secretary and treasurer for the present year. The work of building the new mill at the terminus of Holman street, will be commenced shortly, and when it is constructed, this well-known firm will further extend its operations and its usefulness.

ROMEO.

The Fascinating Fal detta.

[Charles Dudley Warner in the Hartford Courant.]

On the first sight of the women of Malta, gliding about the streets in black, you think they have thrown their skirts over their heads. But they have not. The fal detta is a combination of hood and cape. Take a black silk apron, gather it close at the top with several runnings and put a whalebone through one side at the edge, so as to form a hood. This sort of hood is then thrown over the head, the "gathers" coming at one side, drawn so closely that it makes a curve, and the apron falling obliquely across the back. It can be drawn across the face so as to conceal everything except the eyes. And the large eyes of soft brown are the last things you or the women would wish to conceal. The costume is a remnant of the Saracenic days, and is one of the many signs of Moorish descent.

This is a very clumsy description of a most fascinating garment. It gives a piquant interest even to an ugly woman—and Providence for our sins still permits ugly women—but it adds a charm to pretty women that is quite bewildering. Mind, this is not my opinion that I venture to give, but that of European ladies whom I have consulted. Perhaps I might not have noticed them otherwise.

All the Maltese ladies, as well as the common people, wear the fal detta to church, though on other occasions European hats are gaining ground with the higher classes. I am speaking at length of this costume because groups of these figures in the street or thronging the churches are the feature of the town. The fal detta is always worn with a black skirt, but some bright color is often worn about the neck, or for the bodice, together with heavy gold necklaces, and the glimpse of this half-hidden warmth of color that the fal detta permits in contrast with the prevailing black is very effective. It is perhaps the most coquettish devotional garment ever invented by the contradictory nature of the sex. I have given much reflection (while we are waiting here for a steamer to Gibraltar) to the reason of its peculiar charm, and I think it lies in this, that it gives to its wearer the mystifying appearance of a demure nun and a dangerous adventuress. How much the large, soft brown eyes and the creamy Moorish complexion have to do with it is a scientific question. But I am getting beyond my depth. What I wish to say is that if the sex wish to look both devout and fascinating, the fal detta is the best invention of their genius. I am told, however, that it is not a comfortable garment in a warm climate, and that the wearing it tends to produce baldness. And when we get to a bald woman it is time to change the subject.

STEAMBOAT DISASTER.

Steamers Scioto and John Lomas Come Together Near Steubenville, Ohio—About Five Hundred Excursionists on Board.

MINGO JUNCTION, Ohio, July 4—At 9:30 this morning the side-wheel boat Scioto, from Albany, which had been down to Moundsville, W. Va., with an excursion party of five hundred souls, given under the auspices of the Wellsville Brass Band, composed from Wellsville and towns in that vicinity, which was on its return trip, collided with the Lomas just opposite Mingo Junction, in the Ohio River, and the Scioto sank in a few minutes. About two hundred and fifty persons are missing. The scenes at Mingo are indescribable.

A little son of postmaster Smith, of Harrison, Clare county, Mich., was put in the yard, the other morning, playing with the cat and dog. These chased each other through the fence, and the boy, better to see the fun, climbed (or attempted to climb) through also. A short time after Mrs. Smith discovered her baby hanging by the neck in the fence, dead.

Ex-marshall Farley Fink fatally stabbed Samuel Clifford, at Lima.

From "The Times."

Editor of the Times: Seeing an article in your paper last week from Arnold Parker, I was impressed with the earnestness with which he appeals to you to continue to enlighten the world in regard to the means by which he was so miraculously cured of rheumatism and hip-joint lameness by using Kendall's Spavin Cure. The article to which he refers by Dr. Bates, impressed me so favorably with the real merits of this remedy that I tried it also for several blemishes on my horses and found it the most perfect cure I ever tried for spavins and other blemishes, as it completely removes the enlargement in every instance by continuing its use for several days after the lameness had subsided. The perfect success I have had with Kendall's Spavin Cure led me to use it on my own person, and for all the family with the best results as a family liniment. While several of the cures made with it have been almost miraculous, none have been more satisfactory than several cures which I made with it of foot-rot and also sore teats as well as warts on teats of cows. I consider it a sure cure for sore teats or foot-rot in either cows or sheep. With the satisfaction in this remedy has always given in every instance, I cannot refrain asking with my friend Parker that you continue to make known to the world this, the grandest discovery of the nineteenth century.

Yours truly,

JAMES A. CAMPBELL.

Nilsson's Early Life.

London Truth.

It is interesting to trace a glorious career to its origin. Miss Nilsson is the daughter of very poor parents, natives of the province of Gotland. They were jacks-of-all-trades, and very musical. Christina had, at a very early age, to do for herself, and was patronized by the owner of a ferry, who took country folks across one of the many lakes about the town of Wexo. She was started by him as an infant prodigy, and her singing and violin playing drew customers from a rival boat. When she was big enough she "tramped" with her father and mother from fair to fair. It must not be supposed from this that she was on the low level of the English women and children who tramp through Kent in the hop-picking season. Poverty is not so degrading in Sweden as in Great Britain and, as hospitality is a universal good quality among the peasantry of Scandinavia, Christina was not exposed to degrading hardships in roving childhood. It was at a country fair that an influential Swedish gentleman discovered her musical genius. His name was Tornerhjelm, and he had heard her sing to a violin accompaniment, which she played herself. At this time she was fourteen. M. Tornerhjelm opened to her successfully the Academies of Holmstadt and Stockholm, obtained for her the protection of the king and Queen, and had her, when she was fit to go to Paris, sent there to study under Wartel. If she forgets these benefits it is unfair to tax her with a short memory for them. What prima donna was ever grateful to a benefactor that she could do without or neglect without serious consequences to herself? A successful operatic star accepts tokens of admiration as her due. Were all the gold of California and diamonds of Brazil piled up and given to her the thanks she might deign to offer in return would be only a polite formality. Nilsson's qualities as a lyric artist were manifestly, from the outset of her career, of a very high order. From the moment she obtained an opportunity to sing in public she wanted neither puff nor clause. However, that opportunity she would not have had if not been for the clever management of M. Tornerhjelm. He got hold of the Emperor and Empress of the French through the King of Sweden and Dr. Evans, the dentist. A wish expressed by them to the Directors of the Theatre Lyrique and the opera house was taken as an order. Christina Nilsson made her debut at the former as Queen of the Night in the "Magic Flute." When she was there Ambroise Thomas wrote for her the score of Ophelia as it now stands. Without fitting well the role, she was admirable in it. Ophelia has not much character. Nilsson has, and always had, a great deal.

Odd Stories.

One of the mementoes of the late Iowa tornado is rooster in summer attire—stripped by the storm of all his feathers save those of his damaged wings. He stalks about the premises as bare as when dressed for the bake oven, and excites much curiosity.

The Haverhill (Mass.) Gazette reports the cutting down of a large apple tree in that city, which was found to have enclosed a fence post. When the tree was cut about it, it fell over, and the post, loose in the center, drew out and broke, a foot or more below the cut. The post is of chestnut as near as can be made out, and must have been enclosed in the tree perhaps one hundred years. The tree, which by grafting bore russet apples, was undoubtedly at the start a wild shoot, which grew to the fence post, and in process of time gradually inclosed and covered it in. The tree trunk is about eleven inches through and the post six inches.

Two curious freaks of lightning are reported from Indiana. Ebenezer Morgan, living in the Morgan neighborhood, about one mile from Jeffersonville, took a pitchfork and a scythe and went to the rear of his residence to cut down some weeds. Lightning struck the scythe, throwing it from him a distance of twenty yards, and turning the steel blade to a blackened color. Young Morgan was thrown violently to the ground, where he remained in an insensible condition until his wife resuscitated him. Wm. Moore, of Veale Township, Daviess county, was passing through a field with a hoe on his shoulder, when a stroke of lightning fell and knocked his hoe off his shoulder, and sent him whirling back over three rows of corn. He was not knocked down, but was severely shocked.

Indispensable to Merchants Shippers
And Producers.

The outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These Trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candled, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case without rehandling.

For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.

The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, addling, or breakage, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in storage. Size of 30 dozen No. 1 cases 25x12x14, weighs 20 pounds.
